Notcutt House, 36 Southwark Bridge Road, London, SE1 9EU

WELCOME TO NOTCUTT HOUSE

A super-stylish high-end workplace in a converted early 20th century warehouse in Southwark, featuring office space with premium facilities for modern day working.

Notcutt House is an ideal workplace for the most discerning businesses in Southwark. Respectfully converted out of a warehouse built in the early 20th century, preserving the original façade, it's an eye-catching interior design treat that creates a wonderfully engaging and inspiring atmosphere. Access is available on highly flexible terms and the range of amenities inside, including luxurious kitchen facilities, breakout and event space and high-tech meeting rooms make this an adaptable space that's up for any task.

Based on Southwark Bridge Road, created in 1819 to provide access to the Thames, Notcutt House is immersed in the delights south of the river. Before Southwark Bridge Road existed, though, this area was known as Liberty of the Clink and was a hotbed of activities that were prohibited elsewhere in the city, including theatre.

Remnants of this legacy remain nearby Notcutt House, including Shakespeare's Globe, the former site of The Clink, and The Rose. The area's industrial past is also represented, with converted warehouses, sawmills, and breweries seemingly on every corner.

Our Southwark workplace is a highly coveted space in this popular area of London – featuring exposed brick walls, wooden flooring, and a creative boutique interior.
